The Battlefields of the Seven Years' War

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

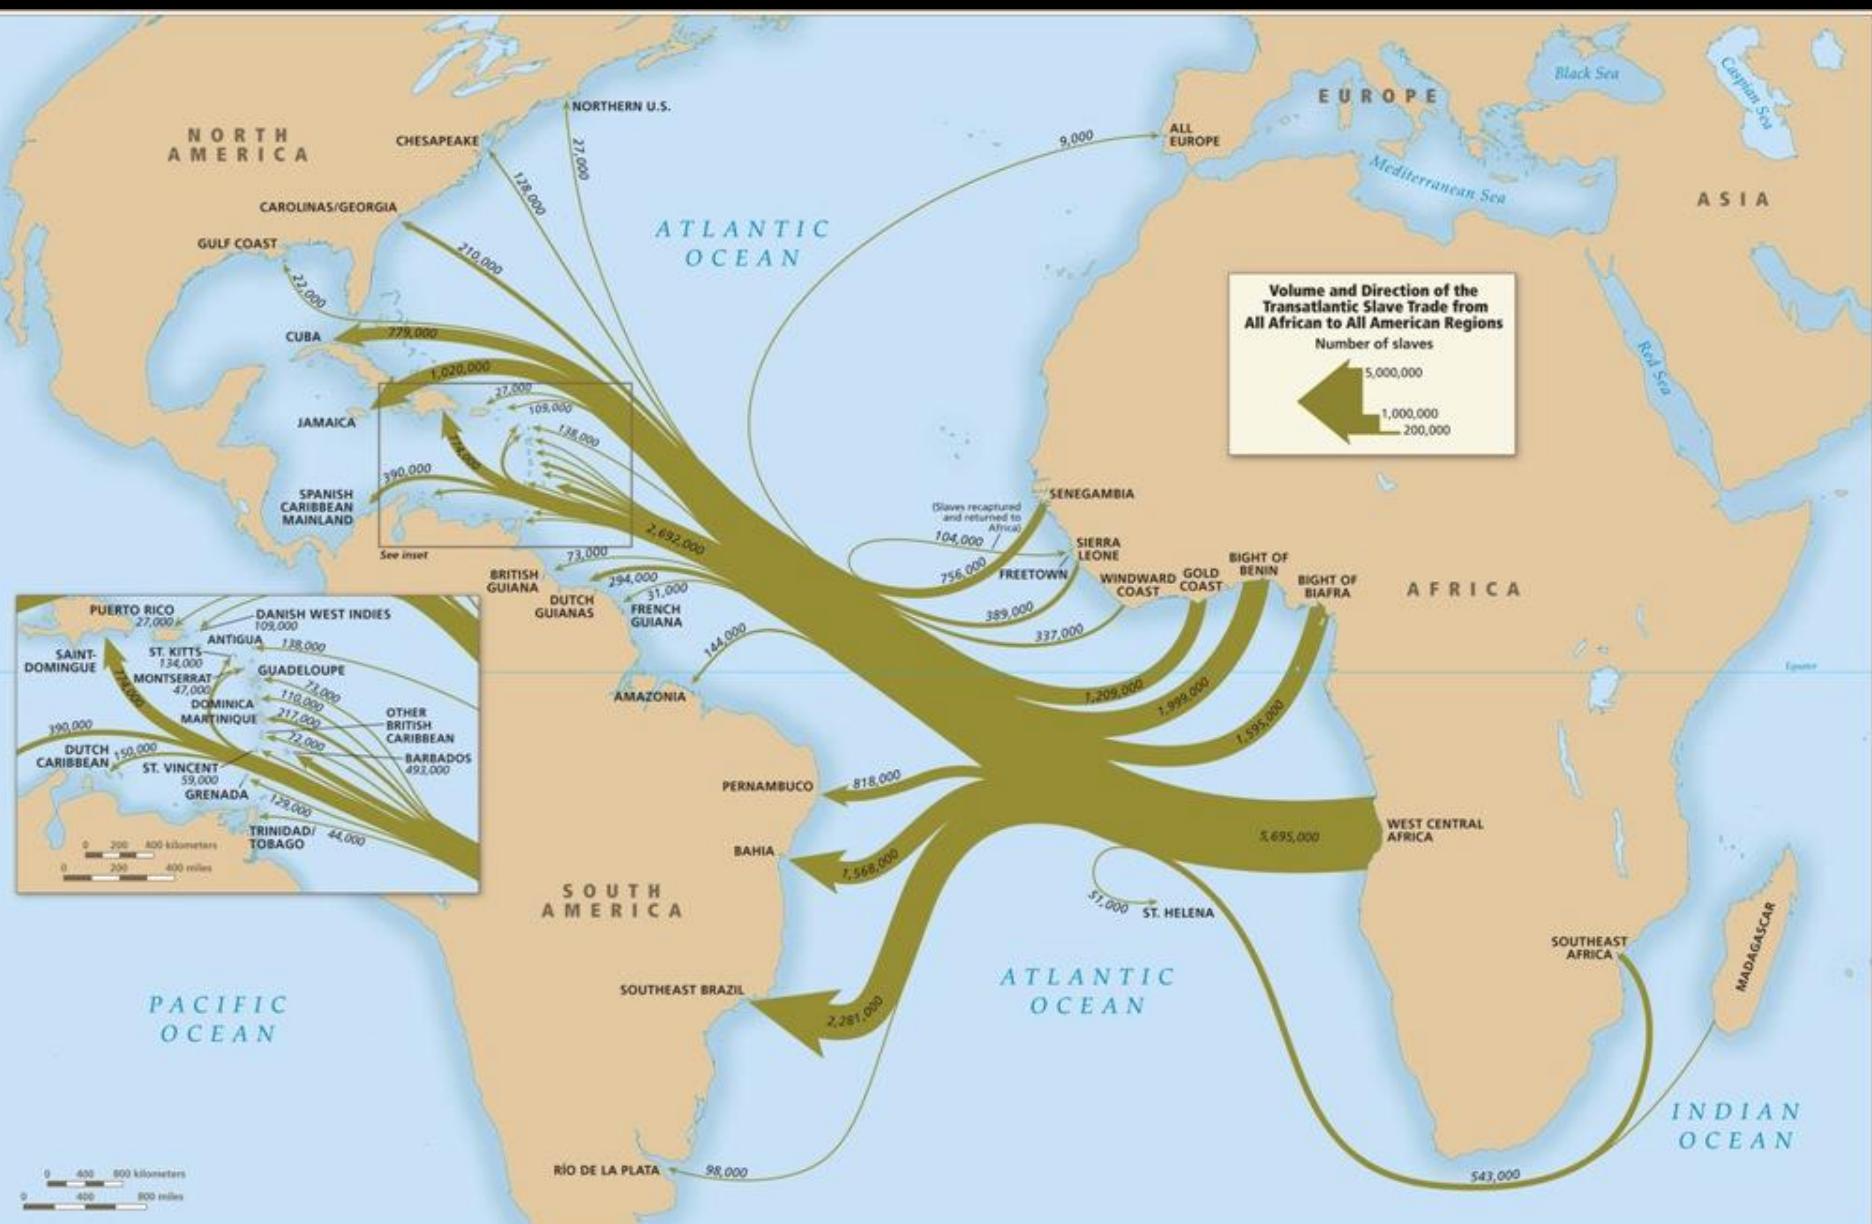

The image shows the original, handwritten Declaration of Independence. The document is written in cursive ink on aged, yellowed paper. It begins with the title "The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America." Below the title, there is a large, ornate signature of the word "July". The main body of the document contains the text of the Declaration, which includes a list of grievances against King George III and the declaration of independence. At the bottom of the page, there are numerous signatures of the delegates, each followed by their names written below them. The signatures are in various styles of 18th-century handwriting.

Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen, August, 1789

The Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen, 1789

PREAMBLE:

The representatives of the French People, formed into a National Assembly, considering ignorance, forgetfulness or contempt of the rights of man to be the only causes of public misfortunes and the corruption of Governments, have resolved to set forth, in a solemn Declaration, the natural, unalienable and sacred rights of man, to the end that this Declaration, constantly present to all members of the body politic, may remind them unceasingly of their rights and their duties; to the end that the acts of the legislative power and those of the executive power, since they may be continually compared with the aim of every political institution, may thereby be the more respected; to the end that the demands of the citizens, founded henceforth on simple and incontestable principles, may always be directed toward the maintenance of the Constitution and the happiness of all. In consequence whereof, the National Assembly recognizes and declares, in the presence and under the auspices of the Supreme Being, the following Rights of Man and of the Citizen.

The Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen, 1789

Article 1: “Men are born and remain free and equal in rights. Social distinctions may be based only on common utility.”

Article 3: “The principle of all sovereignty rests essentially in the nation. No body and no individual may exercise authority which does not emanate expressly from the nation.”

Article 6: “The law is the expression of the general will. All citizens have the right to take part, in person or by their representatives, in its formation. It must be the same for everyone whether it protects or penalizes. All citizens being equal in its eyes are equally admissible to all public dignities, offices, and employments, according to their ability, and with no other distinction than that of their virtues and talents.

The Declaration of the Rights of Woman and The Female Citizen, 1791

Article 1: Woman is born free and remains equal to man in rights. Social distinctions may be based only on common utility.

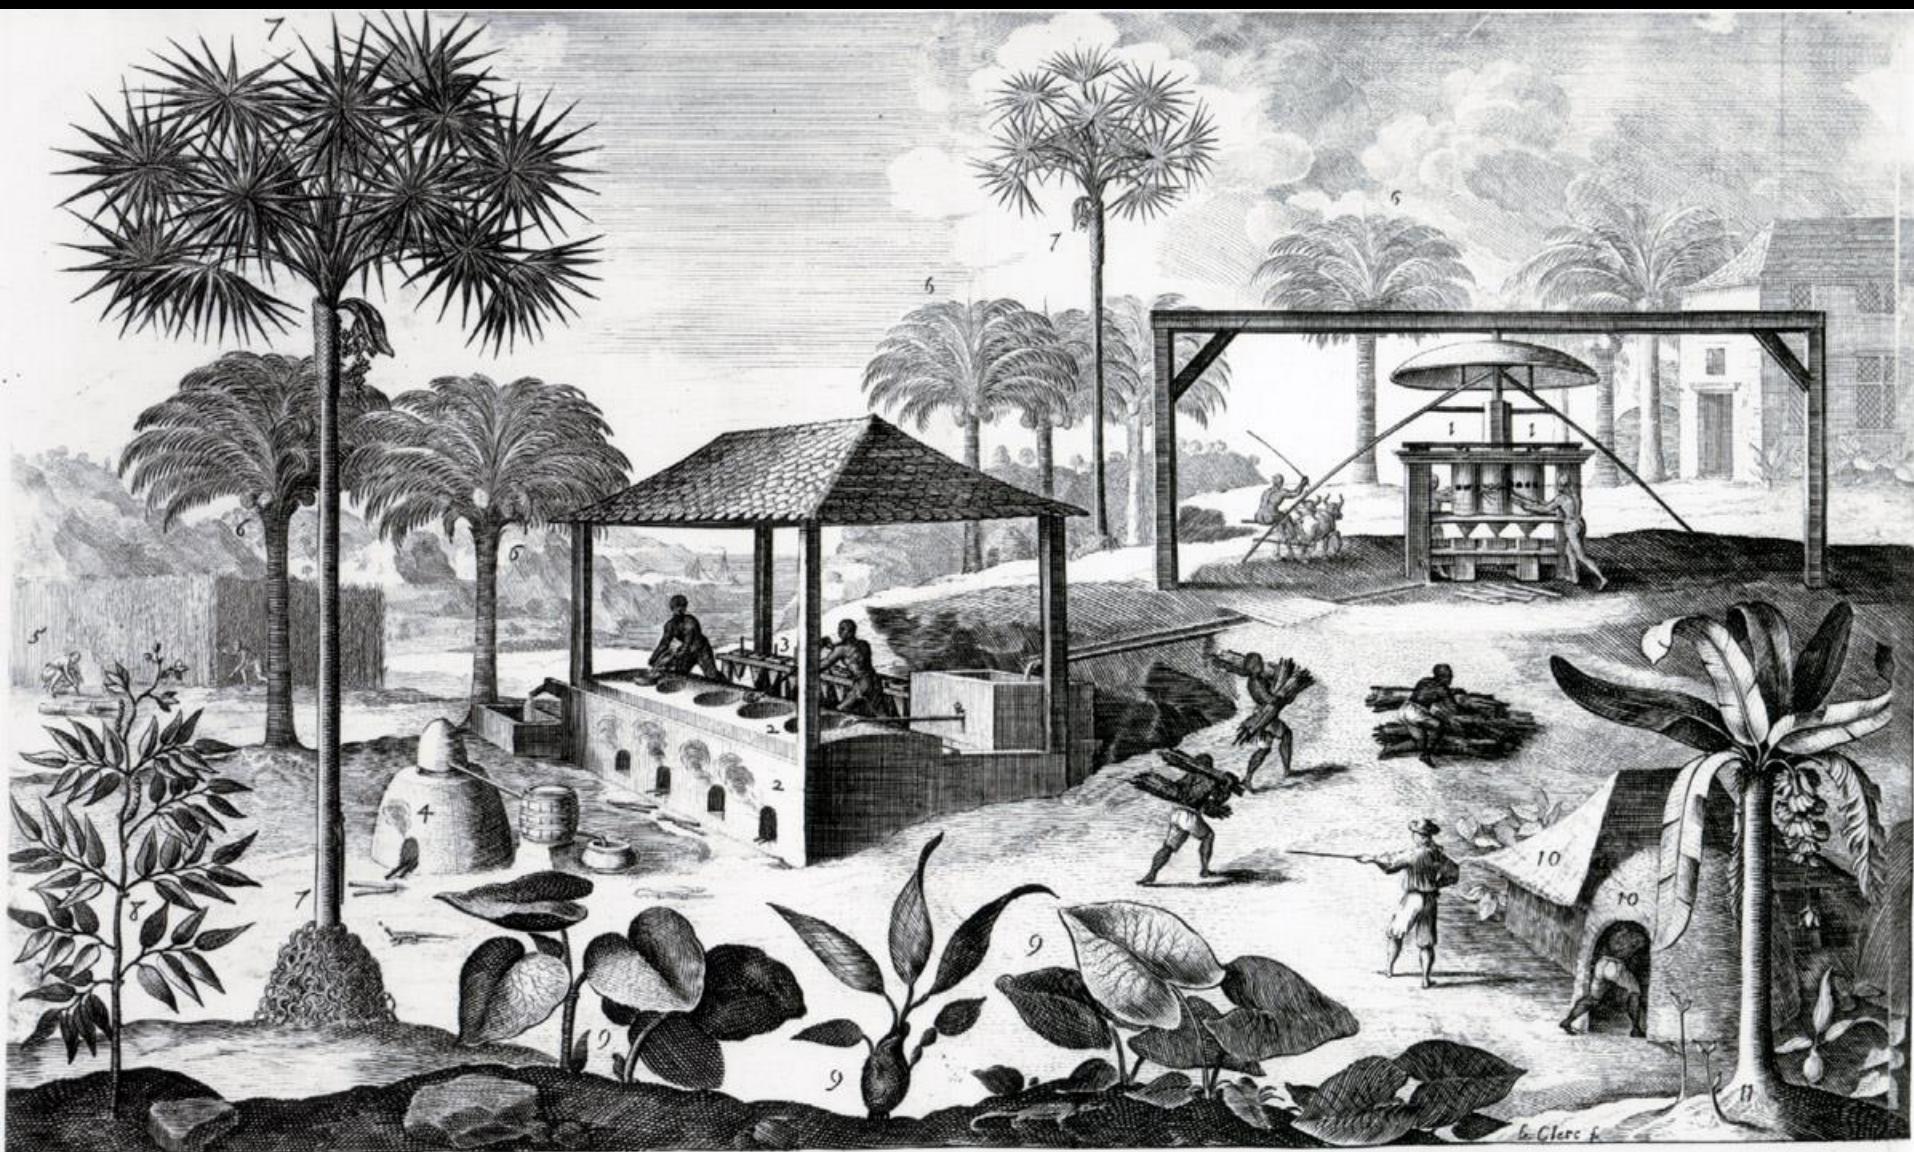

Article 3: The principle of all sovereignty rests essentially in the nation, which is but the reuniting of woman and man. No body and no individual may exercise authority which does not emanate expressly from the nation.

Article 6: The law should be the expression of the general will. All citizenesses and citizens should take part, in person or by their representatives, in its formation. It must be the same for everyone. All citizenesses and citizens, being equal in its eyes, should be equally admissible to all public dignities, offices and employments, according to their ability, and with no other distinction than that of their virtues and talents.

French Profits Derived From St. Domingue Alone, Ca. 1789

- 2/5 of France's total commerce, domestic and international
- 1/8 of all French subjects in metropole connected to St Domingue trade
- Saint Domingue alone exports one-third more than all the British West Indies combined
- French re-exports of goods processed from Saint Domingue raw material rose from 15 Million livres in 1715 to 152 million in 1789
- From 1787-1791, French transport 40% of enslaved Africans to New World, vs. 23% transported by the British

“The French Republic wants all men to be free and equal with no color distinctions. Kings can only be content when they are surrounded by slaves; they are the ones who sold you to the whites on the African coast; they are the tyrants in Europe who want this vile trade to continue. The Republic adopts you among its children; these kings wanted only to load you down with chains or eliminate you.”
